Dan Carroll Named in Bribe Quiz

Dan Carroll was named at a State House hearing today by Samuel Becker, Cambridge trucking business head, as the protege for whose benefit Frank E. Riley, state official, allegedly tried to "muscle into" Becker's $175,000 business.

Becker voiced his charges before the full board of state public utilities commissioners at a public hearing at the State House.

He reiterated his charges that Riley, director of the department of public utilities division of commercial vehicles, extracted $2800 from him in graft and bribes.

WENT TO SEE CURLEY

He went to see Governor Curley, then in office, and to whom Riley owes his appointment, about it, Becker testified. He said:

"I asked him if he could help me. The answer Curley gave me was that he would try and do

$25,000 FUR BURGLARY

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—The Metropolitan Fur Blending Corporation, of West 29th street, reported to police today that burglars had entered its premises on the fifth floor last night and stolen fur coats, fur collars and cuffs, valued at $25,000.

Grove Arm Slightly Better

By WALTER KILEY

There was a slight change for the better today in Lefty Grove's "dead" pitching arm.

Pennant hopes of the surging Red Sox hovered at a bedside clinic in St. Elizabeth's Hospital where the Lanaconing Lancer was taken yesterday with his $300,000 south wing suddenly refusing to perform.

There was no pulse at all in the arm last night but today Sox physician Dr. Eddie O'Brien detected a slight beat.

In fact, at noon today Grove's strength started to return slowly, and if the improvement continues through the rest of the day he will be released tomorrow morning.

The "dead" arm continued to

Unfaithful, Says Mate—Pretty Kitty Brando, former night club hostess, today faces statutory charges in Brookline Court. Her husband charged she accepted the love-making of an orchestra leader in his night club. (Story on Page 13.)

Cambridge Boy, 8, Missing Overnight

Cambridge police today were asked to search for 8-year-old Joseph Dermity, missing from his home in Willow street, Cambridge, since 10 a. m. yesterday.

His mother, Mrs. Ann Dermity, said she feared he may have been drowned. He often went to play along the Charles river in East Cambridge, she said.

All night long, Mrs. Dermity sat on the front steps of her home, hoping the child would return.

He is three feet 11 inches tall, weighs about 55 pounds, has brown eyes and brown hair and "lots of freckles," and when last seen was wearing white trousers, a blue sweater and black and white sneakers.

Find Body Of Milton Woman

Her left hand tied to her left leg with a piece of cord, the body of Mrs. Eleanor E. Kaye, 43, of Brandon road, Milton, was found today in Great East Lake, Maine.

Mrs. Kaye, the wife of a Boston leather company president, had disappeared from her summer home in Wakefield, N. H., yesterday, to go rowing on the lake.

Today police and volunteer searchers led by James Welch, sheriff of Carroll County, N. H., and Louis Young, deputy sheriff of York County, Me., dragged the lake.

The discovery of the body was made by Young and Albert Carey, retired Boston police officer, who lives in the nearby town of Shapleigh. Death was apparently by drowning, officials said.

As yet coroner's office and police officials have failed to reach an official verdict on exactly how Mrs. Kaye met her death.

The body was found 200 feet off men, brokers and bankers, thrilled by Hughes' amazing feat of girdling the globe in 3 days, 19 hours, 8 minutes and 10 seconds, frew sentimental and delirious.

Five years ago today, some of them might have remembered, the town was in something of the same state of mind as Wiley Post's Winnie Mae roared down to a landing at Floyd Bennett Field to hang up a record 7 days, 18 hours and 49 minutes, which stood until Hughes broke it yesterday.

HOWL ACCLAIM TO FIVE

Only this new record seemed incredible. The thousands of men, women and children, jammed around the Battery, Bowling Green and Broadway's sidewalks, stared at the tall, thin Hughes, at his four smiling companions, and yelled their greetings.

The police estimated there were approximately 75,000 persons along Broadway and Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine himself said there were probably 35,000 or 40,000 around City Hall.

The steps of the Customs House, the walks of Bowling Green, the churchyard of Old Trinity Church and of St. Paul's chapel were a tightly wedged mass of men and women.

Restaurants, crowded during the lunch hour, emptied magically, men and women sat on ledges of buildings high above the procession. The storm of ticker tape, fluttering downward in long spirals, the shredded paper, the fluttering flags and banners, and the constant roar of voices seemed to bewilder the fliers at first.

But they quickly got used to the frenzy of the reception.

Hughes, wearing an oxford gray suit, a white shirt and black tie, had slept more than 12 hours. Pale and a little jumpy he was nevertheless fresh. He rode in the first car.

CREW IN ONE CAR

Lieut. Thomas J. Thurlow, U. S. A., navigator, rode in the front seat of the second car. The other navigator, Harry P. M. Connor, sat with Ed Lund, flight engineer, and Richard R. Stoddart, on the rear seat.

The wives of Thurlow, Stoddart and Connor, and Thurlow's boy, Tommy, three, rode in the next car.

All had been driven downtown from the Hampshire House, Central Park South, where Hughes had joined them after spending the night at the Drake Hotel in Park avenue.

The morning had held a threat of rain, but the sun was bright when the party reached the Battery and started north after a delay of only three minutes.

Motorcycle sirens increased the din that flooded the narrow downtown streets.

As the party reached City Hall fresh crowds came swarming in from the section around Brooklyn bridge, the court house district and from streets and offices blocks away.

Early morning skies held a threat of rain, but long before Hughes and his comrades were whisked downtown to the Battery under police escort, the sun had melted away the clouds and was gleaming on the high towers of industry and finance.

FIREBOAT SIGNALS START

Things were in preparation, indeed, even before Hughes and his friends were up and at breakfast.

At the Battery lay the fireboat, John J. Harvey, ready to signal the start of the parade with three blasts of its deep-throated siren.

Three hundred of the 3300 policemen, detailed for duty along the line of march, were at the Battery. People early sought vantage points on the sidewalks, around Bowling Green, in front of Trinity Church and in City Hall park.

Eager clerks, stenographers, brokers, business men stared down from high windows at the gathering crowds.

OFFICIAL GREETING

The parade was to move from the Battery to City Hill, where Mayor La Guardia, who greeted the fliers at Floyd Bennett field yesterday, was waiting to give them the city's official welcome.

From the City Hall the fliers were to be taken to the Metropolitan Club, in upper Fifth avenue, for a private luncheon.

Nazi Edict Periled Hop Of Hughes

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP) —An item of $32 almost cost Howard Hughes extra hours on his 'round the world flight.

The ermen government on June 28, it was disclosed today, refused to issue a permit for his plane to fly across Germany until insurance requirements in German law were met.

Hughes faced the prospect of flying around Germany on the Paris-Moscow leg.

The problem was referred to a Wall street insurance broker. By telephone and cable, the manager of the aviation department, with the aid of U. S. aviation underwriters, the National Aeronautics Association and the Berlin office of the Bankers Trust Company, arranged for 300,000 marks of legal liability.

Four days later the permit came through. The cost: $32.

Hughes Tells Own Story

could have done the same thing.

"The Air Line pilots of this country, who in my opinion are the finest fliers in the world, face much worse conditions night after night during every winter.

"If credit is due anyone it is due the men who designed and perfected to its present remarkable state of efficiency the modern American flying machine and its equipment.

"If we made a fast flight, it is because many young men in this country went to engineering school, worked hard at drafting tables and designed fast airplane and navigation and radio equipment which would keep this plane upon its course.

"All we did was to operate this equipment and plane according to the instruction book accompanying the article.

"With the most advanced and newest equipment developed, my navigators and radio engineer furnished me with such accurate information as to the position of the plane at all times that I estimate for the total trip we travelled only 20 miles more than the shortest distance between the points of takeoff and landing.

"We made no unscheduled stops. We arrived at every point within a few minutes of the estimated arrival time.

"We waited not one minute for weather, flying blind or above the clouds for over three-fourths of the entire trip. We did not even see the Atlatnic ocean.

"The plane is fast because it is the product of over 200,000 hours of engineering effort. Flying practically every minute at the particular altitude most favorable to the plane's performance, depending on its weight, which constantly varied as fuel was consumed, at the same time changing the horsepower as weight reduced, we at no time used over 590 of the 625 horsepower per engine available for cruising.

"We arrived at every stopping point with almost 200 gallons of fuel, which was the reserve decided upon. I have been asked what I considered the most important purpose served by this flight.

"I do not know that any purpose has been served. However, I do feel this:

"The airplane was invented and originated in the United States. Since then the countries of Europe have taken from us one by one all of the aviation records, until at this time the United States does not hold one major record.

"The speed record for seaplanes is held by Italy, the speed record for land planes by Germany. England holds the altitude record and Russia, with its magnificent flight of last year, holds the distance record.

"On top of this there has been a great deal of talk to the effect that our army and navy planes do not compare favorably with those of Europe.

Roosevelt Bride's Sister Sally Prefers Role as Entertainer

Sally Clark, vivacious younger sister of John Roosevelt's Nahant bride, will sacrifice that event of events, her society debut, for the sake of her prospective career as a professional singer, it was revealed today.

Eighteen-year-old Sally will make her bow as an entertainer next Thursday night at the Ritz-Carlton roof.

With that public appearance she will definitely turn her shapely, sun-tanned young back on much of the social whirl in which she might have continued to figure as a reigning belle.

Invited to attend Sally's "opening night" at the Ritz are notables including members of both the Roosevelt and Clark clans.

THREE SONGS

Songs Miss Clark will sing on her opening night with the hotel orchestra are "Tisket Tasket," "Joseph, Joseph" and "Saving Myself for You."

Her choice of a career also lent credence to her recent statements that she is not in love, made when her name was romantically linked with George McLanahan of Philadelphia.

"We are just good friends," she declared. "There is no thought of marriage."

Long and serious preparation was made by Sally for the chance which comes next week. All last winter she trained at the Ned Weyburn School in New York.

Instalment Honeymoon

Cold Keeps Bride, 16, Home

ATHOL, July 15—Happy to have "seen the sights" of Boston with her 63-year-old husband, Mrs. Anna May Boutall, 16, didn't really mind being kept at home today by a cold, she said.

She definitely postponed a New York trip she and Bridegroom Herbert Boutall were planning.

Married only four days ago in a May-December romance, Anna and her elderly mate decided to take their honeymoon trip in "installments" so as not to have to leave the Boutall poultry untended.

SIGHTSEEING TRIP

First installment was yesterday's visit to Boston, with stop-offs at Lexington and Concord. Bridegroom Boutall pointed out to his schoolgirl wife all the points of interest.

More, he told her of Boston as it was before she was born, and of the happenings he had lived through then — when the gold dome of the State House was covered over in 1898, for fear the Spanish fleet would sail into Boston Harbor.

A Boston Evening American reporter and cameraman toured around with them.

LIKES "MRS. BOUTALL"

They visited Harvard, and Bunker Hill Monument, and the Public Garden, and they were to make a night of it, but the warm weather and the excitement were too much for the bride.

She got a headache and had to go home.

"But I loved it all," she said. "And how do you like people calling you Mrs. Boutall?"

She smiled.

"I like that, too," she said.

RIGHT UP IN FRONT—Honeymooning May-and-December take a ride on swan boat in Boston Public Gardens.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 15 — When Lee Tracy sails for England next week to open on the London stage in "Idiot's Delight" he will be accompanied by his bride, the former Helen Thomas.

Hollywood marriages, like murder, have a way of getting out. And we learned today that early next week Lee and Mrs. Thomas will be married in Las Vegas, going immediately to San Francisco and then on to New York, where they will sail for England.

Lee might have kept his secret if he and his bride-to-be had not applied for passports in San Francisco, and if she had not confided to friends that it was necessary for her to get a certificate of her final divorce decree before she could become Mrs. Tracy.

This is Tracy's first marriage.

Ex-Follies Girl Injured in Crash

Mrs. June Bobrow, the former June Castleton, Boston girl who gave up a career as a Follies beauty to wed, was one of nine victims of a head-on automobile collision at Speen avenue and Cochituit road in Framingham today.

Likewise injured were her two children, Dorothy, 5, and Joseph, 4. Driver of their car, also hurt, was Edward Delahanty, 21, West 93rd street, New York City.

Injured in the other machine were Jane F. McGovern, 25, driving; her father, Herbert, 58, mother, Martha, 49; brother, James, 21, and a grandchild, Dorothy Lipeoid, 9, all from Milford.

Junie Castleton

All nines injured were taken to Framingham Union Hospital.

Mrs. Bobrow's husband, Dr. Morris Bobrow, wealthy New York physician, was notified.

Mrs. Bobrow is the widow of Daniel O. ("Dapper Dan") Caswell, Cleveland playboy who married her out of the Follies in 1922 after obtaining a divorce from Jessie Reed. In 1926, however, the Caswells were slated for divorce when "Dapper Dan" died suddenly of pneumonia, and she received a large settlemnt from his estate.

Born in Framingham, Mrs. Bobrow lived with her mother in Back Bay, Boston, prior to her going on the stage. She was married to Dr. Bobrow in 1932.

something, but I heard nothing further.

"I guess Riley crossed up Curley like he crossed me up."

Becker said he went to see Curley before he gave Riley, as he charges, the first $1000, and that he finally gave Riley the money because he decided "even Curley couldn't help me."

Becker charged also that Riley told him:

"You ought to take in Dan Carroll if you want to stay in business. Commissioner Leary wants to push you out of business and make room for his nephew."

NO LEARY NEPHEW

Commissioner Leary—Leo H. Leary of Brookline—sitting with his fellow commissioners hearing Becker's allegations, asked:

"What was the name of this 'nephew,' do you remember?"

"I think," said Becker, "it was 'Riley.'"

"Do you know," said Leary, "that I have no nephew?"

"I have since discovered that," Becker admitted.

When he refused to consider Carroll as a partner in his business, Becker testified, Riley suggested another man, named "Bowen."

"What interest," Becker was asked, "did Riley have in the deal?"

Becker replied:

"Riley insisted if the deal went through he should receive 20 per cent of the net profits."

Becker's troubles began, he testified, back in 1935, when his permit was suspended for two weeks for alleged violation of state labor laws.

He charged that, at Riley's instigation, he got "a man I could trust"—one A. Cooperstein, a relative—and transferred his trucks to Cooperstein's name.

IN KINSMAN'S NAME

He conducted his trucking business, he admitted, in Cooperstein's name during the two-week suspension period.

The suspension became effective October 15. On October 10, Becker testified:

"I drew a $1000 bill from the bank and met Mr. Riley in front of Erblich's store on Court street opposite the City Hall annex, and I gave him the money."

Q—Did you talk to him previously about the suspension? A—Yes, on October 2. I followed his advice to get a man I could trust and he would give me back my permit.

"FOR SUM OF MONEY"

He next saw Riley, Becker stated, on November 2, 1936, at the Manger Hotel.

"I was having difficulty with the Interstate Commerce Commission," Becker explained, "and Riley suggested to me that for a sum of money he could straighten out the difficulty."

Q—Did he ask you for any money? A—He said if I would give him $800, that would straighten the matter out. I told him in view of the fact I already had paid him $1000 it would be hard to scrape up $800 at that time. So I consented to give him $500.

Bribe Accuser Faces Accused

PUBLIC HEARING—Frank E. Riley (left), director of the state commercial vehicle division of the Department of Public Utilities, faces Samuel Becker (right), head of the Becker Transportation Company, in public hearing today. Becker charged Riley solicited and received $2800 in bribes. Riley denies the charges.

Q—What purpose do you allege these payments were made for? A—I paid the money to Riley to save my business.

"PAID" $200 MORE

Again on December 1, at the Manger, Becker asserted, he paid Riley an additional $200 "to apply toward the $800."

The next time he saw Riley, he said, was in April, 1937. He went with Riley, he said, to the offices of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway in Haymarket square.

Their purpose in going there, Becker explained, was to try to get the Eastern's trucking business. Becker stated:

"Riley told me if he could get the Eastern business for me he wanted some money for his services—that he was not going to run errands for nothing. He promised me all the permits I needed, and his payoff would be in lawyers' fees."

"WANTED $200 MORE"

A "Mr. Tom McGarry" at the Eastern's offices, however, Becker said, "told me on account of difficulties with the Interstate Commerce he did not want to take the chance."

Nevertheless, said Becker, when next he saw Riley, in May, Riley wanted $200 for his "services" on the Eastern Railway "conference."

"He drove up in his automobile, and I gave it to him," Becker testified.

Other payments, according to Becker, brought the total he paid Riley to $2800.

Becker admitted he has no interstate commerce permit, having been found guilty of between 400 and 500 ICC violations.

"HE WAS THE KING"

"You want this board to believe that you were nothing but a simple-minded bumpkin from the city, paying money to Riley when he was continually giving you the double-cross?" Riley's attorney, Francis Rafter of Salem, asked in cross-examination.

"Yes," replied Becker, "I thought he was on the level. He made a sucker out of me."

Asked again, a little later, why, if his business was "on the up and up," he became involved with Riley, Becker replied:

"To me, he was like the king sitting on the throne."

It was the following month—June, 1937—that Riley broached the subject of his taking in Dan Carroll, Becker asserted. Riley, Becker said, telephoned:

"Why don't you take another man in with you? I have a very good man in mind who will give you plenty of protection and I will take care of everything else."

Becker testified he met Riley by appointment at the Manger the following noon. Riley, he said, introduced Dan Carroll to him.

"Riley," Becker testified, "told me he was a well-known man in Boston—that his brother was a Senator.

"He repeated he would take care of my permits, and advised me strongly to take Carroll into my business.

"I said I'd think it over. Carroll drove over to my garage in Cambridge with me and looked over my equipment, saying it looked very good."

Later, Becker stated, he, Riley and Carroll met again in Carroll's office at 40 Court street, Boston. There were "several fighters sitting around" the room, Becker said, so he, Riley and Carroll went into an inner office, Becker said he told them:

"I told Carroll and Riley I had an investment of $175,000, I was in a legitimate business, this was not Germany, and I was an American citizen and couldn't see my way into taking a partner just for 'protection.'

"Riley said: 'You don't think we are going to give you any money, do you? We are going to give you protection.'"

In August, Becker testified, Riley phoned with his suggestion of "Bowen" as an alternative for Carroll.

They met at the Statler, Becker said, and he had his attorney, William Schell, with him. Riley, he said, had "a girl friend" with him.

It was after he had turned down the "Bowen" suggestion, too, Becker charged, that Riley phoned him, reiterating the desirability of Carroll and referring to Commissioner Leary.

Captain George Ryan of Engine 6 stepped on a spike and was treated at Cambridge City Hospital.

40 Days' Rain Ahead—Maybe

Just a shower, huh?

Well, that's what YOU thought.

But folks that remembered that today was St. Swithin's Day could have told you different.

They could have warned you that rain today meant "twice 20" lowering and drizzly days to come.

And they could have backed their prediction with legends of more than 1000 years' standing.

It was in 900 A. D. or thereabouts when, according to tradition, there was a move on foot to remove the body of good St. Swithin from its burial place outside Winchester Cathedral, in England.

But rain fell from the angry heavens for 40 days and 40 nights, so St. Swithin's bones were left in peace.

And ever since:

"St. Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain
For 40 days it will remain.
St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair
For 40 days 'twill rain nae mair."

Babs Pawn of Romance

Driven to Seek Titled Suitors

Adela Rogers St. Johns, noted screen and fiction writer, has written the "behind the headlines" story of Barbara Hutton. To Miss St. Johns the young heiress confided her hopes and plans. Today's installment describes how Barbara was driven to seek titled suitors after her romance with playboy Phil Plant was balked by family.

By ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS

(Copyright, 1938, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CHAPTER SEVEN

As the life of Barbara Hutton unfolds it is possible to see one strange fact.

No one objected more than her father, Franklyn Hutton, to her marriage with titled foreigners.

"With so many nice American boys around like Winston Guest and Jim Blakeley, Barbara had to go and marry Mdivani," he said once to close friends in the privacy of his own club.

Yet, it was the intrigue surrounding the breaking up of her romance with Phil Plant which first threw Babs into contact with foreign titles.

It was the trip to Italy, where in the beautiful palace of the American Countess Di Frasso, Barbara met Italian princes and Europe's most charming heartbreakers, that began the whole thing.

Today at Barbara is in hiding in her London mansion with her small son, her titled second husband, Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, walks the streets of London sad and dispirited.

BALKED PLANT MATCH

As the court case of the countess is dropped because, as London gossip believes, another famous titled young man would have been involved, it is possible to go back to the time when her family decided that at all coats they must break up her romance with Phil Plant—and the cost was Barbara's first interest in foreign Don Joans of title.

"I adored Barbara," Phil Plant once said to a close friend, "she was the one girl in the world I really loved. I wanted to marry her. I didn't care anything about her money. I had plenty of my own to give her everything in the world.

"I even suggested to her that she should make a settlement on her father of part of her fortune, and that we should live on my own money. I worshipped her. She was absolute tops.

"But her family objected to me so violently that—well, Babs was worried about a lot of things. She hadn't made up her mind about me. I knew that if she would have me I'd never take another drink.

"After I met her I never looked at another woman. I followed Barbara to Palm Beach, I tried in every way to persuade her to marry me then and there.

"But while she was trying to make up her mind, her family took her away to Europe. That was all right with me. I wanted her to have time to be sure of herself.

"I told her then, 'don't worry, darling. Go to Europe. Go anywhere they want you to go.

"'But, remember that if you find you miss me and can't get along without me, I'll be waiting right here and the moment you come back, we'll be married.'"

FAMILY TO BLAME

They took Barbara away. She went to Italy.

And there she met for the first time Count Emmanuel Borromeo-D'Adda—an Italian prince, famed for his feminine conquests.

And between the dazzling attentions of such experienced men of the world—she was only a kid—and the hot opposition of her family—Barbara sent Phil Plant a cablegram breaking off the understanding between them.

So it wasn't Barbara's fault that she first went to Europe and began playing around with these attractive titled great lovers. It was her family's idea of how to separate her from Phil Plant.

Always, when there is $50,000,000 involved a girl in her 'teens must be surrounded by intrigue, by those trying to control her, by those who want to have a hand in running her vast wealth.

"I wanted awfully to be a boy," Barbara Hutton once told me. "Nobody ever believes things like this, but I dreamed of being a boy and being an explorer.

"I used to spend half of my time when I was a kid looking at globes and maps and thinking how much fun it would be to go everywhere in the world, especially to places where no one had ever been before.

LONGED TO EXPLORE

"I thought it was a shame I couldn't be an adventurer, and take boats and go strange places and maybe make trips to the North Pole and do all sorts of wild and exciting things like that."

Perhaps I am wrong, but it seems to me this has a strange news value today. For sharing our front pages with Barbara Hutton day after day of late has been another young American who inherited millions and millions — Howard Hughes.

When I first knew Howard Hughes in Hollywood I wondered what would become of him. I wondered if he would go the way of so many rich young men who had inherited their money instead of working for it.

"Money so often does strange things to boys," Barbara Hutton had said to me, "it ruins them, makes them wastrels."

It didn't ruin Howard Hughes because he was able to find himself in aviation. Oddly enough, if you will stop to think a moment, Howard Hughes is doing all the things that little Barbara Hutton dreamed about doing when she was a kid—all the adventures, the exploring, the new records for circling the globe. If Babs had been a boy—

But she wasn't. All girls brought up by their fathers alone probably want to be boys and have ambitions and dreams connected with the things men do.

GIFT TO COUNT

The Woolworth heir was a girl—Barbara Hutton. And unfortunately nobody showed her what to do with her time, nobody told the sixteen-year-old spoiled, lonely heiress any particular way to use her time and her money.

That, as you will see, was one of the first holds that the Count Haugwitz-Reventlow had upon her, one of the first things she admired about him.

The Mdivani marriage drew to a swift and dreadful close.

After her desperate illness in London, Babs came back to something like normal—though she still had very little strength. Some sort of a reconciliation was patched up though it didn't amount to much.

If, when she came into sole control of her millions in November, 1934, Babs gave Prince Alexis Mdivani a gift of a larger settlement, it was completely off the record.

If she did, it was for the same reason, I believe, that she eventually renounced her American citizenship—a last desperate effort to make her marriage work, a hot-flame-up of pride not to have to admit that she had made such a stupid mistake, not to allow her family and her friends and the public which was always reading about her doings to say "we told you so."

Barbara came home and Prince Alexis Mdivani sailed for India to play polo. There were plenty of other places. He could have played polo on Long Island, in England, almost anywhere.

He wasn't, as it happens, such great shakes as a polo player, even on the wonderful string of horses with which his rich young wife provided him.

"In America," said Barbara Hutton, giving me a funny little smile, "there are plenty of golf widows. I think that is a term that everybody understood. But I was a polo widow."

Babs came home to America while her husband was in India.

SHIELDS ROYALTY

From Europe now comes inside word that her case against her Danish count was dismissed because she has been asked not to allow Prince Frederick of Prussia to be involved in any way.

He is the intimate friend of royalty, of the Duke and Duchess of Kent, of even the King and Queen of England.

If the time should ever come when there might be any possibility of a restoration of the German monarchy and empire, the handsome young Prince Frederick would be the logical man for the throne.

To have him mixed up in a police court case—a case of threat—

BARBARA HUTTON
Balked in American Match

Kin Foil Ideals

of a woman asking for protection—might do him great harm.

So it may be quite true that little Barbara Hutton, five and ten cent store heiress, descendant of the grocery clerk, only one generation removed from the day when the Woolworths simply weren't "recognized socially," has been asked to attempt to protect this scion of a great and ruling house.

If that's true, I don't think she's like it much. For, at heart she really loved her Americans—only they would have none of her and her $50,000,000.

The Mdivani marriage was definitely over. Barbara rejoined him once—they made a pretense of reconciliation—but it was only a sham and a show.

Follow this graphic story of Barbara Hutton's life in the Boston Evening American.

Countess Barbara Enjoys 'Night Out'

LONDON, July 15 (INS)—Countess Barbara Haugwitz-Reventlow returned to the realities of her martial troubles today after a gay night's frolic at the exclusive Ranelagh Polo Club.

She was among the hostesses who took parties to the club's annual polo ball to aid Queen Charlotte's maternity hospital.

With the cream of British society Barbara romped in a miniature Coney Island and indulged in high-spirited cockney dancing.

Hunt 'Glove Gang' In Hotel Holdup

A quartet of "suede glove bandits," who in recent weeks have preyed on Brookline and Back Bay hotels, were believed by police today to have been responsible for the $350 holdup of the Myles Standish Hotel in Bay State road.

Police were certain the same gang held up the Longwood Towers in Brookline, Hotel Hemenway, Back Bay, and the same night attempted to hold up the Metropolitan Theater.

Stage 'Guard Day' in Camp

Co. D, 101st Infantry, National Guard, goes into action at Camp Edwards' war games. Leo Terrio (left) and Clayton Cummings (right) fire machine gun.

BOURNE, July 15 — Today was 'National Guard Day in Sandwich, with detachments from the 8000-odd encampment here participating in a series of events scheduled to last into the afternoon and night.

Starting off the proceedings was a breeches buoy drill by coast guardsmen, followed by an air show of National Guard planes.

Men from the 181st infantry, the 101st ambulance corps and the 182d infantry later moved to Sandwich to take part in a parade.

A band concert was scheduled from seven to nine tonight and a military ball from nine to one a. m.

Tomorrow the 101st medical regiment will go to Falmouth Heights for a guard mount drill at 3 o'clock.

Albert S. Hagar of the 181st infantry, who was rushed to the Jordan Hospital in Plymouth for an emergency appendicitis operation, is reported in good condition.

Much interest was shown in the announcement by Brigadier-General Charles H. Cole that he plans to bring Boston school cadets to the National Guard encampment here during the next few years.

Taylor Asks Nazi Aid in Refugees

EVIAN-LES-BAINS, France, July 15 (AP)—Myron C. Taylor, chairman of a 32-nation conference on the refugee problem, pleaded with Germany today to let her refugees take their personal belongings.

Taylor, head of the American delegation, at the final session of the meeting called by President Roosevelt termed German co-operation vital if the plan of finding homes for 300,000 Jews and other prospective refugees is to succeed.

The conference will pass the job of helping emigration and establishment of refugees in new homes to a permanent committee, to meet in London, August 3.

shore and only 100 feet over the state line in Maine. Great East Lake is in both New Hampshire and Maine.

Harold G. Kaye, husband of the victim, who drove to Wakefield from their home in Milton last night, was deeply shocked by the tragedy.

"He just seemed to go to pieces," said Deputy-Sheriff Harry M. Leavitt of Carroll County, who assisted the dragging operations.

Kaye's is president and treasurer of Kaye & Barnes, Inc., of South street, Boston.

Mrs. Kaye had gone across the lake to pick blueberries and vanished on her way home. Her rowboat, containing her eyeglasses and a sunshade, drifted ashore near the home of Miss Rita Parker, a summer resident.

Mrs. Kaye's maiden name was Pretat. She was married 15 years ago. The Kayes had lived at their Milton address for 12 years. They were childless.

LANDS 500-LB. TUNA

YARMOUTH, N. S., July 15 (INS)—A 500-pound tuna, landed after a six-hour battle by Stanley Busek of College Point, N. Y., set a new fishing record here today.

Map Future Of Babs' Son

LONDON, July 15 (INS)—Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, although cleared of charges he threatened the life of Countess Barbara, is by no means through with his legal difficulties.

Today he spent hours closeted with his attorneys, discussing the future of his son, Lance.

For the first time in weeks of marital strife, it appeared probable that the count would be permitted to see his son in a day or two. His conferences dealt with the question of his possession of the boy at certain times and the possibility of an understanding with the American heiress regarding Lance's education.

It became more evident today that a reconciliation between the Danish nobleman and the former Barbara Hutton is out of the question, and progress is being made toward a separation and divorce under Danish law.

Chinese Turn Battle Tide Near Hankow

SHANGHAI, July 15 (AP)—The tide of battle appeared to be turning to favor the Chinese along the upper Yangtz river, after damaging attacks by Chinese warplanes.

Chinese announced their airmen continually were raiding Japanese forces, both military and naval, below Kiukiang, which the Japanese have been unable to conquer in two weeks of bitter fighting.

Kiukiang is 135 miles from Hankow, seat of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's government and the ultimate objective of the Japanese offensive.

For three days now the Japanese have made no marked advance, and Chinese insist their drive has been brought to a halt. Japanese were silent today, presumably considering the Chinese reports unworthy of comment.

While there was no positive evidence to support the Chinese claims, it is fairly well established that the Chinese aerial force in recent days has damaged several Japanese craft. Some in damaged condition were seen being towed down river.

The Chinese high command in Hankow asserted 45 enemy war vessels had been sunk or damaged.

Southern Mills Cutting Wages, R. I. Man Says

PROVIDENCE, July 15—Drastic wage cuts in southern cotton mills are the south's answer to the newly passed federal wage and hour law, E. F. Walker, secretary-treasurer of the Rhode Island Textile Association, charged today.

Walker said New England cotton manufacturers must now face more ruinous competition than ever from the south, with wage scales there slashed 16 to 20 per cent.

Apparent aim of the southern mills, he said, is to bring wages down as close as possible to the 25 cents an hour minimum, established by the wage and hour statute of 1938.

"Effect of these drastic reductions in the south upon our New England cotton mills will be most disastrous," Walker said. "Competition under such a frightful handicap is practically impossible, nor is there much that can be done about it.

"The southern wage cuts were predicted by many northern manufacturers before the federal wage and hour bill was passed. It was pointed out that the minimum wage of $12 a week established for southern mills under the NRA cotton code became to all intents and purposes the maximum as well.

Hopkins Sees Fewer Jobless

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins is optimistic over the employment outlook, despite a year's peak of 2,853,354 persons on the relief rolls.

"I don't want to be a Pollyanna, but there are signs that the relief rolls might come down," he declared today.

"Production is on its way up. I am convinced there is going to be a substantial increase, but whether it will come this month or next month no one can say."

He said the WPA peak, for the week ending July 9, represented an increase of 1,404,943 from the low point early last October. WPA employment has increased every week since that time, he added.

He announced further pay raises for Southern WPA workers, affecting about 82,000 men.

McAdoo Waits Roosevelt O.K.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, Yosmite National Park, Cal., July 15—President Roosevelt found himself today, near the conclusion of his transcontinental tour, enmeshed in a red hot political primary in California which promised to provide him with some embarrassment before he boards a navy cruiser tomorrow for a month's cruise.

Several months ago, Mr. Roosevelt sent a "Dear Mac" letter to Senator McAdoo, urging him to be a candidate for re-election on the ground that the New Deal needed his long experience.

MAY SPLIT PARTY

But there is real opposition to McAdoo. Two opponents in the Democratic primary on Aug. 30. One is Sheridan Downey, a former Townsendite who ran on Upton Sinclair's ticket in 1934. The other is John W. Preston, former state supreme court justice.

Both the Downey and the Preston camps have been bombarding the presidential train with protests against any Rooseveltian endorsement of McAdoo—warning that if there is it means a split Democratic party in November, endangering Democratic success.

What effect these bombardments have had is not yet apparent. McAdoo rode with the President in his tour of the bay region of San Francisco yesterday. He sat on the President's right at a luncheon, where he devoted his speech to international affairs and invited the world to a new disarmament conference.

WARNS PRESIDENT

Neither Downey nor Preston was present. Downey had telegraphed a warning that Mr. Roosevelt would invite trouble if he endorsed McAdoo.

There are six candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, most of whom are claiming New Deal support.

Mr. Roosevelt passed the first part of his three-day visit of California without a commitment.

Today the President spent viewing th magnificence of the redwoods in Yosemite National Park. Tonight he is due to reboard his train and arrive at Los Angeles tomorrow morning.

Lewis Seeks to Halt CIO Split

WASHINGTON, July 15 (AP)—John L. Lewis undertook today the job of keeping the United Auto Workers Union from crumbling under a factional dispute.

The union, one of the major units of the Committee for Industrial Organization, has been shaken for months by internal dissent and leadership rivalry.

Lewis broke a long silence on the dispute to announce he was considering an appeal for his intervention.

The presidents of 13 U. A. W. locals in Michigan and Ohio spent hours with the CIO chief, urging him to step into the fight and assuring him the bulk of the membership would follow his leadership.

As he recounted the conference to newspapers, Lewis avoided any direct comment on the situation.

He said the local presidents, who described themselves as "middle grounders" seeking peace, represented that the factional fight was "a quarrel among the paid officers rather than a difference among the half a million members."

Maine Deer Model For Disney Movie

AUGUSTA, Me., July 15—A fawn, born in the forest regions of Rangeley, today was headed west to serve as a model for the title role in a Hollywood film.

The animal, taken by wardens after its mother died, is to model for Walt Disney's new picture "Bambi." The deer is "bottle fed," having been raised on milk, boiled water and lime water.

'Disarm Your Tongue,' Italian Tells F. D. R.

ROME, July 15 (AP)—Fascist Spokesman Virginio Gayda invited President Roosevelt today to begin the disarmament he pleaded for at San Francisco yesterday by disarming the "aggressive oratory" of American anti-Fascists.

The authoritative editor in his Giornale d'Italia took note of the President's "good intentions," but added that Roosevelt's words left a citizen of the world "somewhat perplexed."

"They come," he said, "a few weeks after a decision of the three great Democratic militaristic powers to alter their Washington decisions and, entirely because of American insistence, to increase the maximum tonnage limit of battleships from 35,000 to 45,000 tons.

"We would like to suggest that the President complete his yearning for limitation of armaments with more energetic action for the limitation or, better, disarmament of ideological movements of aggressive oratory which at the given moment legitimizes and compels vast armaments in the nations which are assailed by it."

Britain, France Defy Dictators

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
(Copyright, 1938)

PARIS, July 15 (INS)—The entente between France and England has been born again, and today the balance of power has shifted definitely to the advantage of the democracies and peace.

After five years of insults and injuries at the hands of their enemies, the two most powerful democracies in Europe have decided to stand publicly together against the war threats of the dictatorships.

Facing the menace of the Berlin-Rome axis, backed by Japan, there was arrayed today the combined strength of the world's greatest empire and the continent's strongest army.

CAREFUL "ACCIDENT"

That is the deeper meaning of the coming to Paris next week of King George and Queen Elizabeth, the most important royal visit since Edward VII came here in 1904 to create an entente.

Formally, it is merely protocol for every new British monarch to visit Paris.

Actually, by a carefully-arranged "accident," the visit coincides with the desire of both governments to impress on the world, but particularly on Adolf Hitler, that their old friendship has been revived, stronger than ever, to resist the same test it withstood in 1914-18.

HEARTY WELCOME

This is the sort of thing neither government wants to say officially, but the record of events shows how happily they have arranged to celebrate Europe's most important political event since Hitler came to power.

King George's welcome will be far more hearty than that accorded Edward VII, whose visit in 1904 came when Frenchmen, still smarting over Fashoda (the Sudan area whence French troops were forced to retire), hissed him in the streets.

"I didn't hear anything," urbanely replied Edward when French officials apologized.

Japs Threaten Red Invaders

TOKYO, July 15 (INS)—Use of force by the combined armies of Japan and Manchukio was threatened today to repel a Soviet "invasion" of Manchukuo by a Red army detachment.

In a revival of the dangerous border disputes which have frequently had Japan and the Soviets at swordspoints, it was officially charged that some 70 Soviet soldiers penetrated Manchukuo and began to fortify a mountain position commanding the Korean-Manchukuo-Siberian frontiers.

Intervention by the Manchukuoan and Japanese Kwantung armies was threatened.

British Anthem Gets Nazi Salute

LONDON, July 15 (AP)—Allegations that Germans in the former German colony of Tanganyika, Africa, gave a mass Nazi salute when the British anthem "God Save the King" was played on King George VI's official birthday June 9 were brought today before the House of Commons.

An investigation of the report was urged.

Germany Plans Blast at U. S. On 'Gas' Ban

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
Copyright, 1938, by International News Service

PARIS, July 15 (INS) — The German air ministry is preparing to announce that, in view of America's refusal to sell nonburnable helium, the Reich will be forced to return to the use of flamable hydrogen in order to keep the science of lighter-than-air craft alive, I learned today.

It is said that this decision, which is still being debated in the air ministry, when publicly announced will contain a severe condemnation by implication of Washington's attitude. It is asserted that the air ministry's announcement also will point out that, relying upon promises of encouragement after the Hindenburg disaster that America would sell Germany helium, the Zeppelin company spent more than $1,000,000 developing the new Zep.

Of this amount more than a million marks were for special helium containers.

Brazil, which built a large Zeppelin hangar at Rio de Janeiro at great cost, and which has a contract with the Zeppelin Company, is said to be pressing Germany to fulfill hat contract.

The Reich, I understand, has in effect informed Brazil that it is Washington's attitude in regard to the helium which is preventing fulfillment of the contract.

It is believed not improbable that the Brazilian government may informally approach "Good Neighbor" Franklin Roosevelt to exercise his "good neighbor policy" and for affection for Brazil, let Germany have the desired helium.

LIQUOR PLANT STRIKE

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15 (INS)—Western bottling and distribution facilities of Hiram Walker & Sons, liquor distillery, were strike-bound today as 140 men and women employed at the local plant were called off their jobs by the CIO Warehousemen's Union.

Seek Swindler Of Pianists

LEOMINSTER, July 15—A stranger who struck a discord in the lives of a score of Leominster pianists by using them as unwitting tools in a bad check racket was being sought today before he could add to his list of victims.

The stranger, between 50 and 60 years old, and described as well dressed, had visited the pianists and promised them recital work.

Explaining they would need certain type clothing, the stranger gave the musicians checks for $20, although the clothing was valued at only $10. The $10 in change, of course, was given to the stranger. Police said the checks were worthless.

Dr. Goldberg's Funeral Rites Held Today

Funeral services for Dr. Isaac Goldberg, 50, author, critic and editor, were held at 1 p. m. today at his home, in Gardner road, Brookline.

He was author of biographies of H. L. Mencken, Havelock Ellis, Gilbert and Sullivan and George Gershwin and also had written books on musical and dramatic appreciation.

Born in Boston, he attended the city schools and was graduated from Harvard in 1910, receiving his PhD two years later.

During the war, he worked on the Boston Transcript on war news, as well as serving as music and drama critic.

Since then, he was well known for his books and his magazine writings.

He leaves his wife, the former Elsie F. Horvick of Brooklyn, N. Y.

RALPH W. MENARD

Funeral services for Ralph W. Menard, 63, superintendent of the application and investigation department of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, were held today at his summer home on Summer street, Cohasset.

A native of Boston, he had been associated with the Boston company for 40 years. He was president of the Cohasset Drama Society for 15 years and was active in the highly successful South Shore Players.

He leaves his wife, two sons, Lincoln and Lyman W., and a daughter, Miss Cornelia Menard.

Cash Case Ransom Burned

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 15 (AP)—The $10,000 ransom money paid in a futile attempt to recover five-year-old James Bailey Cash, Jr., from his kidnaper several weeks ago will circulate no more.

Employes at the Federal Reserve Bank here have started destruction of the money paid by the father of the Princeton, Fla., boy who already had been slain.

Bank officers said destruction of the $5, $10, $20 and $50 bills was necessary because their serial numbers had been broadcast and innocent persons might suffer were they to receive them through regular trade channels.

One $5 note is still missing.

When receipt is acknowledged, the lower half is sent, and the bills are then burned.

Destruction of the ransom bills brings no loss to either James Bailey Cash, Sr., father of the dead boy, or to the bank. The money will be replaced by the government. Procedure is the same as is employed to dispose of old, worn or dirty banknotes.

Pledges 4000 WPA Jobs Here

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., today received assurance from Washington that more than 4000 WPA workers, idle since June 30, will soon be put back to work at the Charlestown navy yard and the Hingham and Squantum naval stations.

WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins wired Sen. Lodge that the layoff resulted because of failure to sign an appropriation order when the government's fiscal year ended.

Hopkins promised the workers would be allowed to make up the lost time so there would be no loss of pay in the end.

Mansfield, O'Brien Shun Governorship

The list of candidates for Democratic gubernatorial nomination was cut by two today after former Mayor Mansfield of Boston and Thomas C. O'Brien announced they are definitely not in the running.

"It was only because of the insistence of many friends that I considered the matter at all," Mansfield said. "Personally, I had no inclination or desire to be a candidate."

35-Foot Plunge Only Bruises Him

Fred Starkey, 29, of Dover street, South End, under observation today at the City Hospital following a 35-foot plunge from a railroad bridge at Shawmut avenue and Castle street, has a real Popeye constitution.

Starkey, who told police he was a sea captain, suffered only superficial bruises in his fall to the tracks.

Do you "fear" your boss, your job or people?

This fear you won't be successful. If you do, you are robbing yourself of the very thing that would help you. Fear of incompetence, or an inferiority complex takes that fearlessness away from you that would give you confidence.

It makes you pretend and you will find yourself merely acting a part. This is a very understandable attitude if it is the way a great many of us feel, when we are in the company of some one of special distinction.

Fear is partly seen in handwriting in the Graphologist's it can be physical or mental. Fear breaks down your health. Fear destroys your reasoning at times.

You may be the extremely conscientious type that don't FEAR anything or you may never fulfill your wildest dreams. Be courageous, have determination and will power.

In regard to your sense of justice to yourself, if your handwriting reveals FEAR you may be sure it is lacking in self confidence.

Judge Marcus Morton, senior on the Massachusetts Superior Court bench will resign as of September 1 after 29 years service as a distinguished and able member of this court . . . He is a Democrat in his political faith, lives in Newton and was appointed to the bench by former Governor Draper.

JACK CONWAY

Judge Morton's father and his grandfather, in their respective times, occupied the position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts . . . Judge Morton is a graduate of Harvard Law School and began the practice of law in 1885 . . . On Judge Morton's twenty-fifth anniversary on the bench four years ago, former Governor Ely, Justice Lummus, of the Supreme Court, former Mayor Mansfield and other prominent persons in public and business life paid tribute to him for his ability, fairness and helpfulness.

$300,000 Yacht at Scituate

I dropped down to Scituate Harbor to find a 126-foot palatial yacht carrying two speed boats and an outboard motor, tied to the public pier . . . Its name is the Aloha III out of New York . . . One of the officers told me the floating palace is owned by a Mr. James, of New York, that it cost $300,000 to build, has a Diesel engine and is fitted to care for eight passengers, in addition to the crew.

On another side of the pier were two small, badly worn Italian fishing boats, their crews quite happy after coming in with a fine catch of mackerel . . . And, shooting around the water in row boats with the light from the moon flashing on their faces, were a dozen youngsters, each of them happier than many a millionaire.

This column salutes Howard Hughes and his crew for their aid to science and for their remarkable achievement and daring . . . Aviation keeps marching on despite occasional accidents . . . It was Hughes' attention to details that made his flight successful . . . Col. Charles A. Lindbergh attributed much of his flying success to his thoroughness in making plans.

'Atlantic Clipper Weighs 41 Tons

The Atlantic Clipper, recently completed for Pan-American Airways, weighs 41 tons, 3½ times the weight of any of the crack planes now in service . . . It has been built to take passengers and cargo across the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans . . . It can care for 40 passengers on long trips and 74 on day trips . . . The Atlantic Clipper will be able to reach a speed of 200 miles an hour and will have a cruising range of 4000 miles . . . I can still remember when Graham White called off a flight from the aviation field at Squantum to Boston Light, and return, on account of unsatisfactory weather.

Murray Goldstein, a 24-year-old youth who has been deprived of the use of both legs by infantile paralysis, expects to win the Boston Light Swim on August 7 as he did in 1935 . . . HOURLY

PLAY-BY-PLAY IN THE STOCK MARKET

The stock market was as humid as the weather today and despite occasional puffs on the upside showed a distinct tendency to adhere rather closely to previous closing prices.

10-11. Leading stocks edged forward at the opening. But it was a quiet affair and gains were restricted to fractions while a few issues lost a shade. Prices firmed up a bit after the start and in one or two instances point gains showed. Notably in U. S. Gypsum and U. S. Steel. Rails steadied after sagging slightly. Dealings continued slow even though steels and motors lifted upward from fractions to 2 points. Most groups followed along. A flurry of profit-taking was well absorbed just as the hour ended. There were 220,000 shares traded.

11-12. Prices crept ahead a little more but volume remained substantially under that of previous rallies. Some stocks were still a trifle backward, however, there was no really weak spot. The averages at the end of the first hour were released and showed minor improvement. There was no follow through to the modest uplift and profit taking cut down top marks by about a third. Such offerings as there were seemed to be easily absorbed. This helped to prop sentiment but not enough to stimulate much buying. Noon reports showed a total of 340,000 shares traded.

12-1. Shortly after the third hour was under way prices had climbed back close to early highs and one of two specialties that had not appeared opened up a point or so. Steels and motors did not set the pace but other sections gave a good account of themselves. Chemicals were still lukewarm to bullish changes. Sugars perked up along with electrical equipments. The ticker tape was often at a standstill as prices edged ahead and the lack of volume seemed to encourage more profit taking which cut down gains by as much as a full point. Transaction at one hour 400,000 shares.

1-2. Prices gave way before meeting with any support. More than a point cost of gains had been given up in many instances. But it was still a sloppy tape and the market appeared ready to lose transactions. Allied Chemical was a soft spot, down over 2 points, and failed to hang on to its initial gain. Motors also lost ground and could not lift and acted quite sluggish. Mine issues were weak. It looked as if the market lacked a definite equilibrium from which the next real move would begin. Sales 1,300,000 shares.

2—Shortly after the hour began a block of 9000 shares of Nat'onal came on the tape at only after which the price fell to 97½ on heaviest share loss. It was up three quarters. Other steels made a feeble attempt to rally. Trading interest was at an extremely low ebb and the ticker dawdled.

Haney Warns Of Danger in 3d Term Bid

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

NEW YORK, July 15. If only we were awake, we all would be noting the close relation between two recent news items.

These items are the announcement by the President of a four billion dollar lump of pork. The other is the publication of a report that Mr. Roosevelt run for a third time.

To be sure this report is signed only by two officers of a steel workers union, which I infer is affiliated with the CIO. Doubtless however there are many others who like the idea of a growing public debt which enables them to live on "the government" for a while.

They want the "right" to receive the prevailing wage, whether they earn it or not.

This is why some people are willing to sacrifice our democratic and individual freedom. They are ready to accept a subservient judiciary, and reorganized government executive dictators and a third term for the Roosevelts.

The point I would emphasize is that some of us are being lulled to sleep by all this talk about the nation and national thinking.

This talk is just a part of the spirit of nationalism which prevails throughout the world today and finds expression in various ways in Russia, Germany, Italy and Japan.

Bus Lines Seek Old N. H. Routes

First strategic move by Massachusetts bus lines to absorb passenger traffic abandoned by the New Haven Railroad on its recent cut-off Cedar Hill to Readville takes place at City Hall today in a special hearing by the legislative committee of the city council.

The Eastern Massachusetts Rail way hoping to extend its area of service will present a petition for extension of various routes.

Specifically, the line asks for permission of the East River branch freely to Boston.

Hundreds are expected to jam the hearing room including representatives from various chambers of commerce throughout the state.

N. E. Business Shows Gain

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW
Financial Editor

New England industry is beginning to make visible progress. Informed opinion is now to the effect the business outlook for the section has improved greatly in recent weeks.

On all sides there are evidences of revival which should grow stronger in the days ahead.

The consumers' goods industries which New England harbors in such large numbers, have perked up and with prices moving higher they should shortly find themselves in a sellers' instead of a buyers' market.

Cotton mill operations are from 30 to 40 per cent above last December and heavy goods are starting to move more rapidly. While yarns have not yet experienced the activity of the finished goods market prices are firm and the outlook brighter.

The shoe and leather industry is making good progress as hides and skins both experienced sharp price rises. Woolen goods are selling better and a decrease in the stocks of goods has considerably heightened hopes for expansion in the near future.

LINE FORMED

In the language of the technicians a line has formed in the dual averages. Which means that closing prices for the rails and industrials for 13 consecutive sessions have been compressed into a very narrow range. Coming as it does on top of a big rise and since it represents a period in which prices mulled about on heavy volume it is rightfully susceptible to a bearish interpretation.

• • •

We hold the view that these lines do portend lower prices but must admit two inbetween factors demand recognition. The first is that unless and until both averages move out on the downside together it is dangerous to try and anticipate a decline. The second grows out of the first and it concerns the possibility of a false move by one average in the instance the industrials to say around 144 while the rails held within their run.

STATE ST. NOTEBOOK

This false move possibility noted above would be hard to figure and even harder to trade. . . But it could happen . . . Our idea would be to follow it in a careful way . . . By purchasing oils and secondary issues that have lagged . . . But without the rails we will not want too much of such a upturn . . . And if volume failed to expand sharply on such a half-hearted breakout it would be a dead giveaway.

The chemical group has had a sagging eye for some days now . . . And as front-running issues may be sounding a cautionary signal . . . The same goes for Westinghouse and Chrysler . . . And keep watching wheat . . . Note that the announcement of the loan was met bullish and then prices came off . . . Simply because there seems to be a growing feeling in the pits that the grain is high enough as things considered.

Hughes Has Planned Huge New Air Film

HOLLYWOOD, July 15 (INS)—The most talked of young man in the world today is our own Howard Hughes who circled the globe in 90 hours as against Nelly Bly's 90 days.

Just before Howard, who made good in Hollywood as a film producer, took off on his sensational flight, he visited our home town and had a long talk with Edward Small. He agreed, if the trip was successful, to make an air picture for Small, using film that he was to shoot en route as well as thousands and thousands of feet of film which was taken for "Hell's Angels" and never used.

Louella O. Parsons

Incidentally, "Hell's Angels" was one of the first important aviation movies and the film that brought Hughes fame and introduced little Jean Harlow to the public. I wouldn't doubt if Howard himself appeared in his own movie this time. Even that has been discussed.

I don't want to brag, but this column gave the first news of the Hughes projected round the world flight many months ago.

There will be many a woman in Warner's remake of "Dawn Patrol" but there will be a girl, if male talent such as you have seldom seen in one picture. Errol Flynn plays the character which Richard Barthelmess created in the silent version, with George Brent in a co-starring role and Patric Knowles in the part that brought Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. into favorable notice.

Those three will have Claude Rains, Ian Hunter and Melvine Cooper, all top actors in this dramatic story of war-time, first produced in 1929 and one of the most financially successful pictures Warners ever turned out.

She says her husband will be stationed at Alameda in a few months when he becomes a pilot of the China Clipper.

BOSTON AMERICAN

BOSTON, FRIDAY, JULY 15, 1938

Wings Over World

The Editor Says:—The marvelous, round-the-world flight of Howard Hughes, sportsman aviator, and his crew of four proves that American aviation has reached maturity, figuratively has put on long pants, and is now ready to take its place with the railroad train, the automobile and the steamship as a safe and reliable means of transportation.

We are proud that the Hughes flight broke all records for globe-girdling journeys.

We see progress in the fact that it bettered by nearly four days the time of the late Wiley Post, who five years ago flew approximately the same distance in seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes.

We find evidence of the superiority of heavier-than-air craft in the realization that it tripled the speed of the Graf Zeppelin, which in 1929 circled the earth in eleven days.

But breaking records was not the significant thing about this achievement.

The significant thing is to be found in the knowledge that the Hughes plane did exactly what it was expected to do and that at no time did anybody expect it to fail.

IT IS IMPORTANT to remember with what misgivings the public, including aviation authorities, viewed previous flights over oceans and continents.

Today—and the Hughes success proves it—flying is vastly different.

The whole trip was planned and executed with a scientific precision that in itself demonstrates what ages of progress have ensued in the past decade.

MANY LESSONS could be drawn from this notable event. We could fill this page with them. But none would be more worthy of attention than this: Men are not foolish or reckless to fly the Atlantic or to go further, nor are they pitting inadequate ships and equipment against the nearly hopeless hazards of weather and distance.

The near future will undoubtedly see gigantic ships, as comfortable and as luxurious as present day ocean liners, leaving Boston in the morning and reaching London, Paris and other principal cities of Europe by late afternoon.

FOR BOSTON particularly is this prediction of major interest. Our fortunate location as the NEAREST AMERICAN CITY TO EUROPE entitles us to be this continent's aerial gateway.

When scheduled transatlantic flying begins, it must have a RIGHT START. And a right start can only be made by the establishment of the North American terminal in Boston. Efficiency will always restrict planes to straight lines, will ever argue against moving in circles.

Therefore, the air liner that spans the 2833 ocean miles between the Old and New Worlds must come to rest upon the first point of land, which—thanks to Nature, is our Boston airport.

Under no circumstance should the air liner pass over us and fly 168 ADDITIONAL miles to New York or 312 miles to Baltimore.

Convinced by these facts and inspired by the achievement of Howard Hughes and his intrepid companions, we should act NOW to claim the aviation prosperity that is rightfully Boston's.

The Political Parade

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN
WASHINGTON, July 15

NOTHING more exceeds the callousness of the New Deal than the political sensitiveness of its remarkable thin skin.

It was a terrible sin for Governor Happy Chandler to suggest that a way into the Senate could be created for him by the appointment of Senator Logan to the Federal bench. Logan kicked like a Texas steer—so probably no place on the Supreme Court was proposed—and Mr. Roosevelt wrote to him:

"You deserve all the credit in the world for the splendid and unanswerable and unselfish position you have taken."

NOW, it so happens that other Presidents have done precisely what Governor Chandler desired, but that was terrible. The President was thin-skinned on that point.

But Mr. Roosevelt at about the same time was appointing Representative Vinson, of Kentucky, to a life-time job on the Federal bench, but with a string:—The President kept Mr. Vinson in the House for months after he was NOMINATED, AND CONFIRMED BY THE SENATE in order that the man already rewarded with a fat job might render a great service to the Administration in putting through the Tax Bill, of which he was in charge, and trying to put through the Government Reorganization Bill.

THERE have been probably many cases in which Senators, preferring the bench, have found a convenient way in just such a switch of jobs as Mr. Chandler had in mind.

Senator Logan would have adorned the judiciary. He was chief justice of Kentucky before entering the Senate. Why is it that the New Deal could be so thin-skinned in such a case—and so callous in so many others! It's a gift!

OF COURSE, the President could say that if he had leaped to Happy's plea, and Logan had agreed, they would have been going back to Mark Hanna!

When Hanna had managed McKinley's 1896 campaign to a "full dinner pail" finish, he hankered for a Senatorial toga, but his political foe "Fire Alarm" Joe Foraker held one Senate seat, and the venerable John Sherman the other.

Hanna rigged it up with McKinley to create a vacancy. John Sherman was tempted with an offer to become Secretary of State, but once in the cabinet he was ignored, his heart was broken.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

SOME husbands are like vice-presidents around the house. They don't even get a chance to say "yes."

THE KIND of love that flies out of the window, when the wolf comes in at the door, is so small and flimsy that it might just as well have slid out through the keyhole.

THE AVERAGE modern girl-charmer is no "deceiver." He appears to be going through life defying any girl to make him register an emotion that will effect his blood-pressure.

What of Today, Tomorrow?

Boston Is Aerial Gateway to America

Boston as the nation's transatlantic airline terminal is more than probable; it is practically certain.

With Howard Hughes winging his silver plane around the universe in record-smashing time, modern civilization—at least on this side of the water—is within striking distance of DAILY AIR TRAVEL TO EUROPE.

Boston is the one American city on the Atlantic coast which is the nearest to Europe.

By WILLIAM MICHELFELDER
Boston Evening American Staff Writer

Park Commissioner William P. Long explained yesterday, as Boston's outstanding authority on New England airport conditions, if a man were swimming from London to the United States his destination would be Boston, nearest American city.

The Boston Airport is the NEAREST MAJOR AIRPORT IN THE UNITED STATES TO EUROPE.

If John Brown jumped off a wharf at London—a super-ultra-swimmer—he would not swim 168 additional miles to New York, nor 312 miles to Baltimore.

BUT—

If John Brown is going to fly the Atlantic, regularly and safely, in a powerful transatlantic plane he knows, AS EVERY AMERICAN AVIATION EXPERT KNOWS, that Boston is the logical key point in the United States.

Commissioner Long said:

"Boston is better situated in regard to its airport [illegible] the present [illegible] community in the eastern United States.

William P. Long

"The Boston airport is within TWO MILES of the center of the business district. It takes less than a half hour to reach it either by automobile or rapid transit lines.

"THE SUMNER TUNNEL MAKES IT POSSIBLE TO REACH TOWN IN 10 TO 12 MINUTES.

"From the point of view of safety in flying it is ideal as there ARE NO OBSTRUCTIONS on three sides and only one minor obstruction on the fourth.

"IT CAN BE EXPANDED TO AN UNLIMITED EXTENT WITHOUT DIFFICULTY BY FILLING IN SHOAL WATERS TO THE EAST AND NORTHEAST.

"BOSTON IS READY TO BE THE NATION'S TRANSATLANTIC AIRPORT!

"We have extended runways and landing area. The advantages of the Boston Airport are particularly noticeable when the airport is compared with fields in other cities.

"The nearest airport to New York is Newark, N. J., WHICH IS NINE MILES from the city, and takes a HALF HOUR to 45 MINUTES TO REACH FROM THE CENTER OF MANHATTAN.

"Buffalo's airport is eight miles outside the city. Washington has no satisfactory airport for commercial use. Philadelphia is up against a similar problem.

"The Boston Airport is not only convenient to the city BUT IT IS IMMEDIATELY ADJACENT TO THE MAJOR PORT DEVELOPMENTS AND TO SEVERAL OF THE RAILROAD LINES. AIR TRANSPORT SERVICE CAN THUS BE COORDINATED WITH RAIL AND WATER SERVICES.

Commissioner Long said the proper operation of the airport, however, depends on its immediate development and expansion.

The Commissioner added:

"We need more hard-landing facilities. Transatlantic airliners to Europe from Boston would be a REALITY if we made our extensions to Governor's Island, improved our seaplane bases AND LENGTHEN LANDING AREA IN ALL DIRECTIONS.

"THE BOSTON AIRPORT, WHILE CLOSE TO THE WATER, IS AT GRADE 18 AND SUFFICIENTLY ABOVE HIGH WATER SO THAT IT WILL NEVER BE AFFECTED BY EXTREME TIDAL CONDITIONS. It has also never been inundated by flood conditions from rivers, as have many other major airports.

"THE BOSTON AIRPORT'S RADIO BEAM FACILITIES WHEN CHANGED ACCORDING TO LATEST PLANS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE WILL PROVIDE ONE RADIO BEAM WHICH IS ALIGNED DIRECTLY WITH THE SHORTEST OR GREAT CIRCLE COURSE TO EUROPE.

"A seaplane may land anywhere in the vicinity of the Boston Airport, taxi directly to the ramp may either be moored there or be hauled up by a tractor, electric winch, or motor vehicle directly up to the field.

"IN NEW YORK THE TRANSATLANTIC PLANE OF THAT TYPE WOULD HAVE TO LAND OUT IN THE HARBOR.

"Passengers would have to go into tenders, freight and mail would have to be taken off the same way.

"DELAY WOULD ALWAYS BE A FACTOR—WHICH WOULD BE ELIMINATED AT THE BOSTON AIRPORT. THE TRANSATLANTIC PLANE WOULD BE OFF ON TIME AND WOULD LEAVE PASSENGERS IN BOSTON, ON LAND, ON TIME.

"I believe the near future will see Boston as the terminal of America's gateway to Europe."

(Another TODAY and TOMORROW feature will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

But the fishing is fine in Campobello, New Brunswick, where she has been honeymooning. The bride, however, does not like to fish. Her husband, who is John Roosevelt, is very fond of fishing.

Ann Marsters

We were talking about it with the bride's sister, Sally Clark, whom we met at the Ritz roof the other evening. Anne has written to Sally from her honeymoon retreat, and Sally said:

"They have no electricity in the house, and Anne says it's terrible trying to see how you look by lamplight. They can't go swimming because the water is so cold and you'd drown if you fell into it. They go fishing — but Anne hates to fish. Otherwise—she says it's a beautiful place."

Sally herself is an adorable person with a bright personality and a delightful wit. She has been studying dancing in New York with Ned Wayburn and will return in the fall. Unnecessary to Fear Insects In Camps

By TOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE PERSON who [illegible] life in camp in the great outdoors on river and lake is made miserable for some of us by the thought of spiders, snakes, scorpions, centipedes, etc. This is nearly all unnecessary. I talked with a man yesterday who had been bitten by all these varmints from scorpions to rattlesnakes and found him very contemptuous of their prowess.

The tarantula is like a staged cat—it looks worse than it is. There are a good many species of tarantula and the chances are that you are not going to see any of the species you see in the woods that is a tarantula. Like most spiders they have poison glands with which to paralyze their prey, but this is not seriously harmful to man. Raised swellings about an inch in diameter occur around the puncture of the bite but no constitutional symptoms result. The best treatment is to apply solution of iodine or equal parts of ammonia and water as a wet dressing.

The black widow spider is another and more serious matter—although fatalities are not reported but the black widow I found under conditions of civilization rather than in the woods. Most patients are [illegible] bed.

Scorpion bites are of such little consequence that in most cases of the victim hasn't seen to an M.D. he doesn't [illegible] a [illegible].

My informant has been bitten six times by rattlesnakes from Florida to Texas. The worst bite he had came when he upturned a platter with a forked stick and decided to pick it up with his fingers. He got a bite on the middle finger of the right hand so deep that the fangs penetrated to the bone. A tourniquet was put on his arm, a cross cut made over each fang point, which seemed about two centimes of dark blood flow out. Tincture of iodine was applied to the wounds.

Mike Quits Party, Defies Handsome

CHAPTER 22

Carol, Mike and Wish sneaked out to the butler's pantry and made themselves some sandwiches. They laughed a good deal as Wish made Mike forget how hurt and miserable she was. Carol was perched on a bench, eating olives and gesturing as she gave advice.

"I keep telling her, Wish, she's a fool to spoil Handsome. She won't be able to manage him. I couldn't do a thing with Dusty if I didn't put my foot down." Carol gave a fine imitation of putting the foot down, except that her heel hit Wish's toe. The din from the other room was increasing.

More people had come, so they had to leave their little retreat and join the rest in the noisy drawing room. Just then a pretty blonde exclaimed: "Must we take her along too?"

"Certainly!" Handsome retorted. He thought it was funny. Then looking straight at Mike, the pretty blonde continued: "But Handsome, if we told her we didn't want her to go along, would she come just the same?"

The blonde used baby talk very effectively and everybody howled. Mike forced a laugh, too.

The party continued. Mike was seething inside.

"I'm going home, Wish," she said at last.

"I wouldn't. I think it would be a mistake, Mike."

"I'm tired. I have to get to work early in the morning. I live in Brooklyn, and I can't stay out all night!" Mike's temper was up.

"Take it easy. We don't win a world championship every day."

But the whole thing got too much for Mike. Rising, she went over and pushed her way through the admiring women again, and announced she had to leave.

"YOU'LL BE SORRY"

Handsome came over to her when she came out of the retiring room with her coat and hat on. "If you do this silly thing, you'll be sorry." His voice was flat as he tried to keep down his anger.

"Handsome, I'm tired, and bored. I'm going home. Please, let's not quarrel." She did not explain that she felt dowdy, the only woman in the room not wearing a dinner dress.

"I'm not quarreling. I said not to go." His anger blazed through.

Wish tried to intervene. "You stay, Mike."

"I haven't had time to congratulate you yet, Handsome. But it was grand!"

"Thanks." He stood looking at her, begging her, silently, not to go.

"I can't go, Mike. You're making it hard for me, please stay."

"Good night!" And Mike was out the door with Wish following.

Mike was weeping hysterically when she got into Wish's car. He let her cry for a long time, until they reached the Brooklyn Bridge. Then he tried to soothe her.

Wish let her out at her door, and she slipped into the hallway. When he'd gone she walked around the block many times until all the lights were dimmed in their apartment, except the one in Jimmie's room. Then she went into the house.

It wasn't until the next day that Mike first heard of the girl called Iris Hansen.

Mike did not see Handsome the next day. She'd be home, she was to be thirty miles before she would see him, she could not face it, of course! She did her work in a cold, efficient manner. Handsome's office staff was frantic. Handsome's friends telephoned, every hour. And she lived from minute to minute just waiting to hear his voice.

MIKE PENS NOTE

The first morning she wrote a little note and left it in his box at the desk. When he had not come in hour after agonizing hour, she could not endure the thought of Iris Hansen being there to see.

As the newspapers came in she ran through all of them to see just what each said about yesterday's victory. In them she came across the photograph of Handsome and a girl called Iris Hansen. In one of the tabloids.

It was taken at the Inferno. It showed crowds around the table, asking for his autographs, and the girl called Iris, sitting beside him.

Mike was more reasonable this morning. Speaking to herself she thought in this wise: "I must expect that. He's a famous person. He'll be photographed with many people. I must keep my head" . . .

Six o'clock. Mike slowly checked up stock. He had not called, nor stopped to see her. Desperately she wondered if he had received her note. She could not walk across that lobby to see whether it was still in his box. The bellboys would know, and the room clerk. She couldn't!

Mike waited until seven. Then she started for home. But she could not go there. She walked over to Fifth Avenue and got on top of a bus. She rode to the very end that way up town, and then back again, to 42nd Street.

At home she'd think she was with Handsome and her mother'd not question her. It was not after 11 when she got home. To tell her mother was waiting.

"I wanted to talk to you, dear." Mrs. Shannon had been dozing in her chair. She looked faded and old and Mike's heart smote her.

"Yes, Mother." She answered.

"Tell me all about the big day. And what did you two do for the

THEIR FIRST QUARREL! Handsome orders "Mike" to remain with their guests. "I said not to go," he declared. "If you do this silly thing, you'll be sorry."

Mike made some kind of answer but Mrs. Shannon sensed that something was wrong. I saw that picture in the paper, Mike. That's nice, isn't it?"

Mike blurted: "Mother dear, he's famous. We must expect that. He'll have a lot of pictures in the newspaper with a lot of people. We must get used to the idea. Don't you worry!"

She dropped a kiss on her mother's head. "Go to bed now, Jimmie's awake but I'll read him to sleep."

"He waited up for you last night," Mrs. Shannon said.

"I just couldn't get home any earlier," but Mike could not meet her mother's eyes.

STILL NO WORD

Jimmie's were sharp too. But she managed to satisfy him with her story of the game. That night after she got into bed, Mary was awake and she had to report further. There was no escape for Mike.

Next morning, before she left the house, she wrote Handsome another little note. She dropped it into the box at Times square, knowing it would reach him by mid-afternoon at the latest.

At first Mr. Downes asked her to take some newspapers to the board room where the men were meeting. That gave her a chance to walk past the desk and look at Handsome's box. Her note of yesterday was still there.

"He'll get it a little while," Mike was getting jumpy.

Tonight was the dinner given by sports fans to the writers from Reuters to be speeches and presents. It was a stag dinner and Mike planned to go home and listen to the broadcast with Jimmie.

"I'll feel better for having called her."

Another day. Mike had come to hate the hateful pit of the air. When Handsome's voice sounded, with its pleasant laughing drawl, she had to make an excuse to leave Jimmie's bedside. She could not bear it so near and so aloof.

Another day. And no word from Handsome. The people at the hotel were beginning to wonder. Mike and Handsome had had trouble. She wasn't seeing him any more. Nobody dared ask her. Toward night Wish came in, stepped off to talk to her. Even Wish, dulled data ask.

The hurt in her eyes was too deep. He did not have the courage. He talked about Handsome casually, as though he was unaware that there was trouble.

Perhaps it was seeing it in black and white which so terrified Mike. Next morning when she got to work, somebody had left a newspaper marked for her to see. It was a paragraph in a Broadway column.

"What matrimonial heart has switched from a redhead to a blonde, now that he's rumored"

Mike tucked the paper away and went on calmly. Today Mary's panic had turned into a rage. If he came, she wouldn't talk to him! Today's newspapers showed photographs of Handsome with his new car which had been given to him.

Mike could work up a fine rage of indignation against Handsome. But she would soften soon. She looked down at her typing now and then for reassurance. He couldn't get along without her. He'd send. Then anguish would crush her. Three days she had received one word from him.

HANDSOME CALLS

Abjectly miserable Mike went to a movie that night, stayed through two shows, huddled up in the dark row. It was a sad picture. It was almost midnight when she came home. But the whole flat was lighted. The family was waiting up for her.

A Case of Lost Face; Japan Admits Impotence

MORE SIGNIFICANT THAN THE SUPERFICIAL fact of Japan's surrender of its 1940 Olympics is the insular and bellicose nation's voluntary "loss of face." By frankly admitting its inability to finance the world's No. 1 sport feature, Japan has "lost face" in the community of nations.

AUSTEN LAKE

In the Far East "losing face" is an admission of weakness, a fall from social caste or any open display of embarrassment. An Oriental would rather cut off his toes than "lose face." He fears ridicule more than bullets.

Hence, in confessing that its financial structure is so infirm that the few additional millions required to underwrite the Olympics might extend its credit beyond the limit of utmost stretch, Japan is imposing self humiliation in lieu of greater misfortune. It gives ominous hint that the little brown brother is nearer to collapse in his "China Incident" than the Western World suspects.

Given Japan's confession is a happy solution to an awkward [illegible] in the community of nations. For the [illegible] were creeping [illegible] by the commercial and political [illegible] purpose of the games which was to promote a common [illegible] between the peoples of the world, whether [illegible] or [illegible] in Europe and to be [illegible] the [illegible] have come and gone without prejudice or [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MR. BOSTON

Shikat Defended By Irishman | New York Spot For Olympics

By JACK CONWAY

I HAVE received a letter from Steve Flanigan of Cottage street, Roxbury, who insists I have been unfair in my treatment of Dick Shikat, German heavyweight wrestler, who clashes with Steve Casey of Ireland in a bout for the world's title at Fenway Park on next Tuesday night.

Mr. Boston

"I am an Irishman," writes Flanigan, "but I always like to see a fair bout.

"Don't you think you see only one way when you write about Dick Shikat? You declared Shikat was unduly rough with Dan O'Mahony. You didn't object to the way Clark acted against O'Reilly or the methods Casey used in his bout with Robert.

"I believe Shikat wrestles just normal for today. As for what Casey did against Robert, I would say it was a boxing bout as far as Steve was concerned. All Casey lacked were gloves. If Casey had wrestled fair, his bout with Robert would have been a swell one.

"I'll admit Casey is the strongest man in the ring, and very fast, but he isn't the best wrestler in the world.

"I hope you will say something about Steve's unfair punching before his bout with Shikat. If you do, it might help to make this match the high class affair it should be."

What Shikat Did to Danno

THERE ARE thousands of Irishmen who agree with my statement that Shikat violated all of the rules of fair play in his Garden bout with O'Mahony. Shikat deliberately picked O'Mahony up and tossed him head first in the direction of the stone floor of the Garden.

I shuddered at the time as I feared Danno would receive a fractured skull.

Danno was able to turn his body slightly so that he took the force of the blow behind his left ear and on his left hip. The young Irishman carried nasty wounds from his injury for a week.

O'Mahony was in a helpless condition at the time Shikat tossed him over the ropes, and it is difficult for me to excuse such actions [illegible] admit to Steve Flanigan that Casey punched Robert and very unfairly. Robert, a former amateur heavyweight boxer, was getting the delight out of smacking the big Irishman on the jaw. It merely happened that Casey was able to punch faster and harder than Yvon and finally knocked the Frenchman out with a terrific right hand punch to the jaw.

Unfortunately punching has come to be accepted as a part of wrestling. True, it has not any place in the mat game, but neither was the butt or flying tackle that were made so popular and extremely profitable by Gus Sonnenberg.

It was the Sonnenberg influence in wrestling that changed the sport over. The old Dynamiter's butt and tackle made such a wide appeal to the public and resulted in such tremendous gates that no promoter would evoke the strict rules of wrestling.

I would suggest to Paul Bowser that he put the best possible referee in charge of the Shikat-Casey bout. There is bad blood between the two fellows in view of Shikat's remarks concerning Irish wrestlers and the match is likely to develop into one of the most bitter ever staged in this city.

Even Steve Flanigan may forget his feelings about fair play once Shikat treats Casey as he did O'Mahony. If Flanigan is a true Irishman, and I have every reason to believe he is, he will probably be out there rooting for Casey to break the powerful German into tiny bits. Wrestling fans get that way under the stress of battle.

Random Shots at Target

IT LOOKS as if Bill Bingham moved just a bit too quickly in resigning from the Olympic committee because the 1940 games were awarded to Tokio, Japan . . . Japan took care of the games in 1936 by withdrawing that on account of the present hostilities in the Far East . . . Japan will stage the Olympic classic . . . I would like to see the games come to the United States . . . New York would be the ideal spot for the Olympics and they would prove a valuable attraction for the second year of the New York World's Fair.

Ben Lesser, member of the registration committee of the New England A. A. U., tells me that Los Angeles made money on the 1932 Olympics . . . The business interests of California got solidly behind the Olympics, made them an athletic and financial success, and then got their investment back with a reasonable profit . . . Gene Driscoll, another A. A. U. leader, would also like to see the games come to this country . . . As they do not take place until 1940, there would be plenty of time in which to make the necessary housing arrangements.

Ebbets Field, N. Y. would furnish an excellent stadium, with more than sufficient room near the stadium for the erection of a gigantic swimming pool . . . Water sports have always been an important part of the Olympics.

Boston, unfortunately, has not the proper facilities for staging the Olympic games . . . I believe local track, field and swimming fans, however, would be satisfied if the games went to New York . . . With present improved transportation facilities, New York is only a few hours from Boston by train, plane, boat or motor . . . The Chicago World's Fair was so successful that it ran for two years, and it is likely that the New York World's Fair will do likewise . . . What better additional attraction for the second year of the World's Fair than the Olympic games?

Finland Offered 1940 Olympics

Finns Prepared; Knew Japs Would Quit

BULLETIN

HELSINGFORS, July 15 (INS)—The 1940 Olympic games, abandoned by Japan, were offered formally today to Finland.

Ernst Krogius, president of the Finnish Olympic committee, received the offer by cable from Count Henri de Baillet-Latour, president of th lenternational Olympic committee, who is in Paris.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, July 15 (AP)—Representatives of the Finnish Olympic Committee, the government and Helsingfors municipality decided to meet tomorrow to discuss possibilities of arranging for the 1940 Olympics.

Informed sources said Helsingfors already had made certain preparations secretly in the expectation that Japan would back out.

Urho Kekkonen, home minister and president of the Finnish Amateur Athletic Un on, said Finland would be prepared to honor her promise to undertake the games if a request to do so came before Sept. 1.

Ernst Krogius, president of the Finnish Olympic Committee and member of the International Olympic Committee, was said to be in communication with Count Henri de Baillet-Latour, president of the International Olympic Committee.

Count Anxious Finland Have Games

LONDON, July 14 (AP)—Count Henri de Baillet-Latour, as president of the International Olympic Committee, will offer the 1940 Olympic games to Helsingfors, Finland, when he has been officially informed of Tokyo's decision to relinquish the games, he said tonight.

"I have no doubt that Finland will accept," he told the Associated Press. "The Olympics might be on a smaller scale, but they certainly will be held."

Just where the Olympic winter games will be held, he said, will be decided after consultation with other committee members.

Jap Cabinet Approves Moves

TOKYO, July 15 (AP)—The Japanese Cabinet added its no-thank-you today to the 1940 Olympic games.

The action approving the stand of Welfare Minister Marquis Koichi Kido cancelling Tokyo as the site of the 12th Olympics made the matter final.

Mayor Itta Kobayashi of Tokyo has the right of formal cancellation, but he said: "When the government decides as a matter of national policy to call off the games, I have no choice but to accede."

The Cabinet in a night session decided also to cancel plans for the 1940 Tokyo International Exposition to observe the 2600th anniversary of the foundation of the empire.

The Cabinet will inform the International Olympic Committee soon of its action. Although the decision on a substitute does not rest with Japan, athletic circles mentioned Helsingfors or London as possibilities.

Tobin Asks Olympics For Boston

Boston today had joined New York and Los Angeles in the quest of the 1940 Olympic games, surrendered summarily by war-torn Japan.

As soon as word reached here of the Japanese move, Mayor Maurice J. Tobin dispatched a wire to Avery Brundage, head of the U. S. Olympic committee, asking him to do all in his power to bring the international games to this city.

While sportsmen throughout the section applauded Tobin's gesture, they were extremely doubtful that Boston or even America would land the plum.

The games go to nations by rotation, and the United States was host to the athletes at Los Angeles in 1932.

In addition, there is no stadium large enough in the metropolitan area to house the games.

Finland Likely To Get Olympics

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—Now that Japan has tossed in the towel, the 1940 Olympic games are almost certain to be conducted in Helsingfors, Finland, a neat little city of 200,000 in the far north.

Gene Tunney Gives Louis Five Years

CHICAGO, July 15 (AP)—Gene Tunney believes that boxing's heavyweight championship crown is lodged securely on the head of Joe Louis—"at least for five more years and probably longer than that."

The former heavyweight titleholder, who came here preparatory to addressing educators attending a Purdue University summer session, is convinced that none of the current crop of fighters is capable of whipping the Brown Bomber.

What type of fighter will defeat Louis, should he remain active?

PICKS DEMPSEY

"A good boxer," replied Tunney, "and a fellow who won't allow himself to be hit. In the recent Schmeling fight Louis did just what he should have done in his first bout with Max—walked right out and let go at Max."

Tunney thinks the man he dethroned, Jack Dempsey, "probably would have beaten Louis if he could get in close," but then added: "I'm not so sure Dempsey, in his prime, could have gotten in close on Louis."

"Louis attacks with a fury, as Dempsey did," Gene continued. "Louis, however, is more scientific in his attack and in all his career I don't think Dempsey turned on such a crushing offense as Joe used against Schmeling. Jack was fast, though—fast at weaving away from an opponent's punches and it sure would be a great fight to see—Dempsey and Louis at their best."

LOUIS REFEREES

Louis returning from New York held a conference with Promoter Mike Jacoba concerning a possible bout next fall with Max Baer, said "it's up to my managers, Julian Black and John Roxborough—they have the final say." Black recently said Joe would not fight until next spring.

The Brown Bomber refereed one bout on the amateur boxing card last night at Soldier Field, where Tunney defeated Dempsey 11 years ago. Tunney also was to have refereed but was unable to fulfill the engagement.

Leonard Medalist In N. H. Amateur

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., July 15 (AP)—Thomas J. Leonard, Jr., of Nashua, gained medalist honors in the New Hampshire amateur golf qualifying play by posting a 149 for 36 holes on this White Mountain course.

Leonard had a stroke lead on Dick Heneage of Hanover, the Dartmouth star, who won the 1937 medal in this competition, and Warren Tibbetts of Manchester.

Grove Has Made 200,000 Pitches

By WALTER KILEY

Fans are a lot more concerned today with the condition of Bob Grove and his chances of returning shortly to the Red Sox fold than they are with the arrival of the lowly St. Louis Browns, who open a four-game series today (doubleheader on Sunday) at Fenway Park.

The Sox need Robert Moses and need him badly. Three games away from the league leanding Yankees, any prolonged confinement for Lanaconing Bob might well sound the death knell to their pennant hopes.

Suffice to say that today Johnny "Footsie" Marcum must go out there and do his part in carrying on, sore arm and all.

Gabby Street with Umpire Ed Rommel during the recent Yankee fiasco.

The Browns must survive the Boston series without the services of Manager "Gabby" Street, who was disciplined by President William Harridge of the American League with a three day suspension for "volcable argument" with Umpire Ed Rommel during the recent Yankee fiasco.

The only good thing about Grove's mysterious injury was the sudden and miraculous return to form of Jack Wilson, who took over for Lefty Bob with none gone in the fifth, two on, and held the Tigers to five scattered hits and one lone run.

Afterwards he said that his long ailing pitching arm never once bothered him, that only on one or two curves did he feel a twinge.

Which means that should Grove be a long absentee, young Wilson graduates into the "ace" role, the man who must carry the brunt of the Sox heavy pitching burden.

Some idea of the strain on Grove's arm can be seen from figures. During his major league career dating back to 1925 when he joined the Athletics from Baltimore, he has pitched in 544 games. Say he pitched to an average of 30 batters per game. That's 16,320 to face him. Then say he threw up four pitches per batter, and that makes him tossing 65,280 times in all.

Let's continue on and guess that between his first year with Martinsburg and his five with Baltimore, plus all the pitching he did in the bull pen, spring training and daily workouts, and we find that ancient left wing of his has withstood the stress of close to 200,000 pitched balls.

So little wonder that he is laid low with a "mysterious" malady. Looks more like nature getting its innings.

Grove is financially independent. He has always been conservative in habits and saving.

Despite two fine cars and plenty of hunting, fishing and golf, he has more than enough laid aside to take care of himself and family.

Grove is most devoted to his family. Nothing is too good for Son Bobby and the younger daughter. Both are due to get the finest college educations, Bobby, Jr., entering his final year of high school, to matriculate at Duke a year from next fall.

"I got mine the hard way. I don't want my kids to have to suffer the same fate. They'll get whatever I can give them," he often said.

The "King of Lonaconing" was of the town's aristocracy. Which meant that as a kid he worked in the glass works, while most of the townies endured the mines.

He got $100 a month for his first start in baseball which loomed mightily important money. His present salary is estimated at $20,000 per annum. Most of his fortune is in mortgages. He never had any dealings with the stock market.

Strangely enough Grove never hit the no-hit "Hall of Fame."

Grove was purchased by Philadelphia from Jack Dunn's Baltimore club for a reported price of $125,000. He was traded to Boston Red Sox in the winter of 1933 with Max Bishop and George Walberg for Hal Waratler and Bob Kline and a reported $125,000.

During his first spring training with the Red Sox, Grove's arm went "bust." Fans thought Yawkey picked up a lemon, just as today they say the same about Owner Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs and his Dizzy Dean purchase.

* * *

Grove had his tonsils out and his teeth and finally began to make a comeback winding up the 1934 season with eight wins and the same number of losses. The next season, 1935, was his best in Boston. He won 20 games and lost 12. In 1936 he won 17, lost 12. In 1937, he won 17 lost 9. This year he has won 14, lost three, giving him 271 major league victories, 29 short of his major goal of 300.

* * *

Joe Cronin tells that Ed Linke, who is here with the Browns as a pitcher, had an arm similar to Grove's in the days when he was hurling for Washington. They never could find a pulse in his arm. Some days he would have absolutely no feeling in it. He would shove a heat pad in his hip pocket. When his arm felt numb, he'd touch the pad, and the effect would be like a balmy on a horse. They finally got wise to the ruse and made him throw the pad away. Yet today he still has no visible pulse.

Frisco Offers: Island for Olympics

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15 (AP)—Man-made Treasure Island in San Francisco bay was offered today by officials of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition as location for the 1940 Olympic games, relinquished by Japan.

Exposition officials sent a telegram to the American Olympics committee asking that the event be held here. They said the exposition could be extended through 1940.

Helen Waterhouse Bids for Title

EASTERN POINT, Ct., July 15 (AP)—The final round of the Shenacosaet women's invitation tournament today found the event an all-Providence, R. I., affair with Mrs. Fred G. Davis meet Helen Waterhouse for the coveted Griswold Cup.

Mrs. Davis played the most brilliant golf of the pair in eliminating Jean Bauer, also of Providence, and three times holder of the trophy, 6 and 4.

'WHY I FLEW AROUND WORLD'--

Hughes Tells Own Story

NEW YORK, July 15 (INS) — Howard Hughes issued the following statement today as he left to join the parade up Broadway in his honor:

"I have written this out because I am afraid I might get nervous and not say just what I want to. You may be assured no one has written it for me. I am not very good at making speeches and I have consented to make this one only because there is one thing about this flight that I would like everyone to know.

"It was in no way a stunt. It was the carrying out of a careful plan. It functioned because it was carefully planned.

"We who did it are entitled to no particular credit. We are no supermen.

"Any one of the Air Line pilots of this nation with any of the trained army or navy navigators and competent radio engineers in any one of our modern passenger transports

WORLD FLIERS HAILED BY MILLIONS IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP)—Howard Hughes and his four globe-circling companions rode triumphantly up lower Broadway today, from the Battery to City Hall, in the most tumultuous heroes' parade New York has held in a decade.

It was like a throwback to the halcyon days when Jimmy Walker was mayor, when Lindbergh first flew the Atlantic, Gertrude Ederle conquered the English Channel and Admiral Byrd flew across the North Pole. The canyons of the financial district echoed with cries of greeting to the intrepid airmen.

17-MINUTE UPROAR

For 17 minutes—the time it took the procession of cars to reach City Hall—downtown New York screamed its praise for the multi-millionaire Texas sportsman and his mates and showered the men with ticker tape, tore up and emptied from the windows of the world's greatest skyscrapers telephone books, old stationery, letters, newspapers.

Title Cost Windsor $1753

LONDON, July 15 (AP)—The British government told taxpayers today it cost them $1753 to give former King Edward VIII, now the Duke of Windsor, his new dukedom and title.

Supplementary civil estimates issued today included an item for £350 ($1750) for stamp duties on "royal warrant, letters patent and the docket creating the dukedom of Windsor" and 12 shillings ($3) for duties on the title "H. R. H. Duke of Windsor."

(Edward VIII abdicated in December, 1936, and was succeeded by his brother, now King George VI.)

FLORENCE, Italy, July 15 (AP)—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor had an impromptu luncheon today with Princess Maria, youngest daughter of the King and Queen of Italy.

Airliner Crashes Hospital

BUENOS AIRES, July 15 (AP)—A Pan-American Airways plane in the Buenos Aires-Miami service crashed into the top of a hospital building in a Buenos Aires suburb today, causing the death of one occupant of the building and injuring 15 others.

Although the plane was wrecked, Pan-American Airways said the eight passengers and five crew members escaped serious injury. Two United States passengers were aboard, James H. Ervin and J. G. Gibson.

The big plane made a large hole in the building and slithered off to the ground.

AUTO KILLS DOE

BRUNSWICK, Me., July 15—Harry C. Ross, of Dorchester, Mass., and his eight-year-old son, Harry, Jr., suffered minor hurts today when their automobile struck and killed a 150-pound doe on the highway here.

Second Transfusion For State Trooper

PLYMOUTH, July 15—Doctors at Jordan Hospital were watching today the effects of a second blood transfusion given State Trooper Joseph W. Kelley, who was seriously injured Wednesday night when his car crashed into a telegraph pole on the Carver road.

The blood donor was Kelley's fellow-trooper, Albert Goslin of Dorchester.
